

Source : The New Indian Express

Date : 15.06.2009

REVERSE TENDERING ■ Pvt players could get state-owned urban land at a pre-determined price, with certain riders
Affordable houses may come up on govt land

CHENNAI ■ While the government will have to build for the poor, and specifically cater to the housing problem, the private sector can play a role in the development of the city. The government should not be afraid to allow private players to build affordable housing on state-owned land. This is the view of the Housing Minister, Mr. K. Anandavelu Pillai, who said that the government should not be afraid to allow private players to build affordable housing on state-owned land. He said that the government should not be afraid to allow private players to build affordable housing on state-owned land.

Expressions of interest would be invited from the private sector for building houses at the lowest price possible.

The Housing Minister, Mr. K. Anandavelu Pillai, said that the government should not be afraid to allow private players to build affordable housing on state-owned land. He said that the government should not be afraid to allow private players to build affordable housing on state-owned land. He said that the government should not be afraid to allow private players to build affordable housing on state-owned land.